Cape Dorset, Nunavut: Canada's Most Artistic Municipality

Artists in Small and Rural Municipalities in Canada, a new report from Hill Strategies Research, finds significant concentrations of artists in small and rural municipalities across Canada. Many Canadians may be surprised to learn that the municipality with the most artists as a percentage of the local labour force is not Montreal, Toronto or Vancouver. Rather, Canada's most artistic municipality is a small northern community with no paved roads.

Cape Dorset, Nunavut, with almost one in four labour force workers in the arts, is the most artistic municipality in Canada. The artistic concentration in Cape Dorset (23%) is:

- more than double the artistic concentration in the second most artistic municipality (Squamish-Lillooet D Regional District Electoral Area, largely situated between Vancouver and Whistler, B.C., 9.4%);
- almost triple the concentration of artists in "Canada's most creative neighbourhood" – the H2W postal area on Montreal's Plateau (8.0%); and
- almost 30 times the national average of 0.8%.

Other facts about Cape Dorset include:

- Carving and printmaking are listed as "major economic activities" on Cape Dorset's website, which also calls itself "the Capital of Inuit Art". The hamlet's website also notes that the "cost of living is 65% greater than Montreal".¹
- It is located just north of the 64th parallel, compared to Toronto (43°41'), Montreal (45°31'), Vancouver (49°15'), Winnipeg (49°88'), Whitehorse (60°72'), and Iqaluit (63°74'). (Figure 1 provides a map of the location of Cape Dorset.)
- It has no paved roads.
- Two well-known Cape Dorset visual artists are Kenojuak Ashevak (a recipient of the Order of Canada whose best-known works are prints and drawings) and carver Ohito Ashoona (recipient of the 2002 National Aboriginal Achievement Award for arts and culture).²
- Inuit art is "probably the best-known face of Canadian art on the world stage".³

Artists in Small and Rural Municipalities in Canada is based on a custom data request from Statistics Canada's 2001 census, conceived of and commissioned by Hill Strategies Research. The full report and regional summaries are available for free from the Hill Strategies Research website (<http://www.hillstrategies.com>).

A key finding of this report – that there are significant concentrations of artists in small and rural municipalities across the country – demonstrates that the arts contribute to the quality of life and the social and economic vitality of many small and rural communities in Canada. Particularly in small and rural municipalities, a strong artistic community can lead to “pride of place” and can therefore enhance the whole community’s well-being. A strong artistic presence can also help to draw new residents to communities, including artists and others who are stimulated, inspired and entertained by the arts.

Previous reports by Hill Strategies Research showed that there are 130,700 artists in Canada, representing 0.8% of the overall labour force. There are 22,100 artists in the 264 small and rural municipalities with reliable data, representing 17% of all artists in Canada.

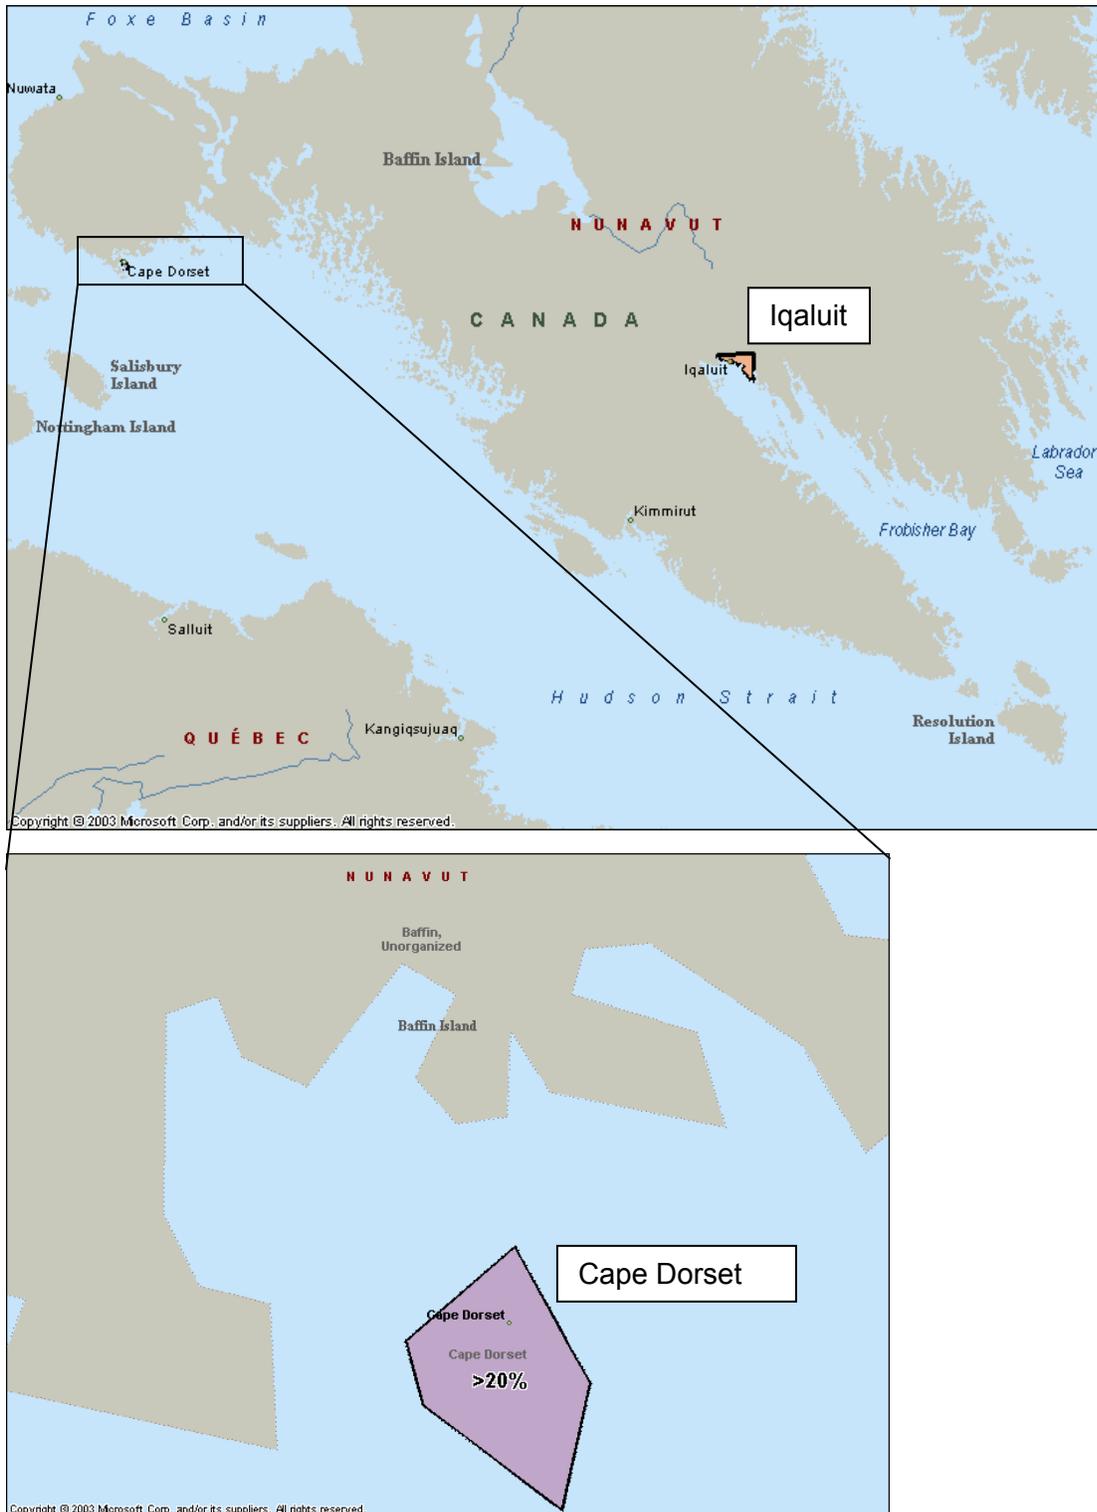

Table 1 provides a list of the 10 most artistic small and rural municipalities in Canada. Of note:

- Seven of the 10 most artistic municipalities are in British Columbia.
- Nine have an overall labour force of fewer than 5,000 people.
- Outremont, the only municipality on the list with a labour force of more than 5,000 people, was a smaller municipality in central Montreal in 2001. On January 1, 2002, Outremont was amalgamated into the City of Montreal.
- The most artistic small and rural municipalities have much higher artistic concentrations than larger Canadian municipalities (population over 50,000). In fact, the large municipality with the highest artistic concentration ranks only 28th among the smaller municipalities. (A subsequent report in the Statistical Insights on the Arts series will examine 92 large municipalities in Canada.)
- The two municipalities with the highest artistic concentrations are also the two smallest municipalities with reliable data on artists.

Report and data notes:

- The full report, funded by the Canada Council for the Arts, the Department of Canadian Heritage (Canadian Cultural Observatory and Arts Policy Branch), and the Ontario Arts Council, is available free of charge on the websites of Hill Strategies Research (<http://www.hillstrategies.com>) and the funding organizations. The report is the thirteenth in a Statistical Insights on the Arts series by Hill Strategies Research.
- “Small and rural” municipalities are defined as those municipalities with fewer than 50,000 residents, based on 2001 municipal boundaries. Census data is available only for the 264 small and rural municipalities with 40 or more artists. A subsequent report in the Statistical Insights on the Arts series will examine 92 large municipalities in Canada.
- Data is reported for the municipal boundaries that existed in 2001.
- Nine arts occupations are included in the analysis: (1) actors; (2) artisans and craftspersons; (3) conductors, composers and arrangers; (4) dancers; (5) musicians and singers; (6) other performers (such as circus performers and puppeteers); (7) painters, sculptors and other visual artists; (8) producers, directors, choreographers and related occupations; and (9) writers.
- The census captures information about the occupation at which a person worked the most hours between May 6 and 12, 2001. Overall, census estimates of artists may be somewhat low because of the frequency of multiple job-holding among artists and the May timing of the census.
- The occupational categories are not a perfect fit for all artists but do provide a reasonable approximation of arts employment and self-employment. However, media artists are not well captured in the occupational classifications. In addition, the selected occupational classifications exclude those teaching arts disciplines in post-secondary, secondary or elementary schools. Those teaching artistic disciplines at private or other types of schools (such as dance schools) are included in the figures.
- Please see the full report for more information regarding the methodology of this report as well as a discussion of Census strengths and limitations.
